In Christian iconography, Saints Peter and Paul are almost always depicted together, rather like twins. That may seem odd because they probably looked nothing alike and they had very different personalities and temperaments. Peter worked largely with Jewish Christians and Paul with Gentile Christians. Peter has been connected to preserving the tradition and Paul is remembered for welcoming the freedom of the Spirit. However, both were committed to keeping all the members of Christ's Body united in faith and love. Their faith in Christ, love for the church, and zeal for fostering the unity of the Christian community bind Peter and Paul together as no superficial resemblance could. There is a lesson here for today's Church. We don't all agree about how much to stick to tradition and how much to allow the Spirit to guide the Church onto new paths. Yet both are necessary for continuing Jesus Christ's mission on earth. And Peter and Paul show us that remaining united in love as the one Body of Christ is more important than allowing differences of interpretation to divide us from one another.

"What does freedom mean?

*It is certainly not doing whatever you want,
allowing yourself to be dominated by the passions, to pass from one experience to another without discernment, to follow the fashions of the day;
freedom does not mean, so to speak, throwing everything that you don't like out the window. ...*

Let us not be afraid of life commitments, commitments that take up and concern our entire life!

*In this way our life will be fruitful!
And this is freedom: to have the courage to make these decisions with generosity."*
